
YOUR FAMILY'S HEALTH LIVES IN SEVEN PLACES.
KAAVISH RAMCHANDANI
01 / 10

I've spent nine years marketing luxury homes, hotels and brands across India and the UAE. Every buyer I meet in Mumbai now asks about the same thing first. Health.

Indians live 70.8 years on average. 60.3 of them in good health.

WHO, World Health Statistics 2021. India, 2019 data.

That's about ten years where the body needs help. And in Mumbai, that help is scattered across the city.

An air purifier in every room.
A water filter under the sink.
A gym membership across town.
A physio twice a week, in traffic.
Blood tests at a lab in Andheri.
A sauna at a spa, by appointment.
Sleep from a white-noise app.

Seven places. Seven subscriptions. And the family does the coordinating, while the home, the most expensive thing they own, just sits there.

So I was just thinking about what happens when the building does the coordinating.

One home. Every system built in. Filtered air and water from one plant in the basement. Bedrooms built for deep sleep. A recovery suite and a movement studio downstairs. A clinic on the fifth floor. One health record for every family.

That's a longevity home. It protects the ten years in between. It's designed, run and serviced as one building, so it keeps protecting them.

I'M BUILDING THE FIRST ONE BETWEEN JUHU AND BANDRA WEST. DM ME IF YOU WANT TO BE IN THE ROOM.
KAAVISH RAMCHANDANI
10 / 10